ANTHROPOCENE, CAPITALOCENE & THE FLIGHT FROM WORLD HISTORY, PART II

GENERICSCIENCE CAPITALOCENE, CHEAP NATURE, DESCARTES, GEOCULTURE, MARXISM, NATURALISM, NATURE

My critique, and its reconstructive alternative, recognizes that Civilization ('Society') and Savagery ('Nature') do exist, but as strategies of domination and superexploitation – hence the structural recurrence of bourgeois naturalism in the geocultures of domination. (Every era of capitalism must reinvent racism, sexism, and other forms of domination through the ideological meatgrinder of bourgeois naturalism.) Unlike Malm, I do not see this critique of ideology as playing

"semantics." Ideology in the class struggle is, to borrow from Marx, a material force.
